About the programme

We are proud of dlr Primary Arts Programme; it is one of the oldest artists in schools' programmes in the Country. It began in 1994 and has supported thousands of primary school children and their teachers. Working with primary schools is one of the best ways that we can support children to get access to the arts as it happens during school hours, so all children get to take part.

- The programme will run during the academic year (October 2025-May 2026).
- Schools apply to take part in the programme. Six classes will be chosen.
- Six artists are matched with six different teachers and their classes.
- We will fund 24 hours for the artist to work with the children and teachers in the classroom.
- We will pay artists for their time to plan with the teacher outside of the classroom.
- We will fund time for the artists research and time to input into the dlr Primary Arts Blog.
- There will be three meetings with the artists and teachers during the programme in Blackrock Education Centre.

How will we select the artists?

We will assess the applications with a panel which will include representatives from dlr Arts Office and an artist that has experience working with children in primary schools. The decision of this selection panel will be final. The applications will be marked based on the scoring system outlined below.

The minimum qualifying mark is 80. This means that any application which scores under 80 will not be eligible for selection.

If none of the applications we receive reach the minimum 80 marks, we will not choose from this open call. We will then use a different selection process instead. We will select six applications. We may form a panel from the applications if any also score over 80 marks. We may use this panel for further projects if more funding becomes available within a one-year timeline.
